Los Banos Has a New City Manager

(Los Banos, CA) - Mayor Mike Villalta announced today that, “Alex Terrazas, currently Assistant Town Manager at the Town of Truckee in Nevada County, has been selected by the City Council to be the next Los Banos City Manager. The Council made its decision at their June 1st meeting.”

According to the Mayor, “Alex brings a broad range of experience to Los Banos that will prove valuable as we focus on important areas of economic and community development.” Terrazas’ experience includes over twenty years of experience working in two California cities, experience working with the League of California Cities, and experience working as a Congressional aide.

Terrazas says he is excited about becoming the next Los Banos City Manager and is looking forward to making the move. “Los Banos has some great opportunities for economic development and challenging issues to deal with. I am looking forward to working with the Council, staff, and community and regional partners to collaboratively address these opportunities and challenges”, said Terrazas.

Throughout his public service career Terrazas has developed a broad range of experience and been responsible for a number of programs and projects including economic development, transit, redevelopment, state and federal legislative relations, emergency preparedness, franchise agreement administration, and labor negotiations. Terrazas has most recently been working to support high tech startups and small businesses by helping to create small business loan programs and organizing a Startup Weekend in the Lake Tahoe region.

Mayor Villalta reports that Terrazas’ first official day on the job will be July 1st but has already made several visits to Los Banos. Terrazas is married and has a 14 year old daughter.
